Niseko Consulting

NEW OFFICE: Upper Hirafu, Sasayaki-zaka St. (just below Wild Bill's)

THERE'S no surer sign that the season is winding down than the sound of snow melting back around the house on a sunny March morning. I think everybody who loves the Niseko winter is always sad to see it go, but there's still spring skiing to be had until early May, and the other great Niseko seasons to enjoy before it's all on again in another eight months time (keep an eye on www.powderlife.com for summer news, events and updates, as well as the snowfall progress from September on).

If you were lucky enough to be here during the 09/10 season it was about as good as it gets in terms of snowfall, visitor numbers and the progress of the resort as a whole. The town was buzzing throughout the winter with more and more nationalities starting to appear in numbers. In particular visitors from Hong Kong, but we also saw plenty more Singaporean, Malaysian, Chinese and Europeans.

As this is our last issue of the winter, we've done a bit of a season wrap, but also have plenty of articles and information for those who are here throughout the rest of March and April. In Fluff, our weather watcher The Don tallies the season's snowfall, and we preview a new winter motorbike race up Mt Moiwa (page 9). We bring you the Best of Niseko 2010 winners (p10), rerun our heart-warming 2008 interview with the wonderful taiko drumming legend Roku-san who sadly passed away last month (p17), review psychedelic bar/restaurant Jam Bar (p20), and much more.

We hope you've enjoyed reading Powderlife as much as we've enjoyed covering all the powdery action and bringing it to you this winter. See you next season!

積雪量、観光客の数、街全体の開発の点に関して言えば、09/10シーズンのニセコを味わう事ができた皆さんはラッキーでした。各国からの観光客でビレッジは活気に溢れていました。今年は特に香港からの観光客が多く、またシンガポール、マレーシア、中国、ヨーロッパからの観光客も多く見られました。

今号はシーズン最終号にふさわしくシーズンのまとめ記事が中心ですが、3月、4月を楽しむためにニセコに来られている皆さんの為にも多くの記事、リゾート情報を掲載しています。Fluff ページでは「The Don」による気象予報、9 ページではモイワ山で行われるモーターバイクレースの予告記事を紹介しています。その他、『Best of Niseko 2010』入賞者紹介(10 ページ)、先月お亡くなりになった伝説の太鼓奏者『ろくさん』の心温まるインタビュー(2008年に掲載、17 ページ)、サイケなバーレストラン『Jam Bar』の紹介(20 ページ)など、話題盛りだくさんです。大いに楽しんで紙面を作ってきた私達と同じくらい、皆さんがパウダーライフを楽しく読まれた事を願っています。また来年会いましょう!

fluff light news and stuff from around town

We're looking at 15m+

BEING the last issue of the season it's time to look back at how it all went. The first snowfall at village level was back on October 31, which is reasonably early, and it sure got hopes up for a big season ahead. But November ended up being rather disappointing, with regular warm periods between snowfalls. This fickle weather continued through into early December, however from December 14, the snows came and barely stopped till the end of the month. For much of January, Niseko just kept doing what it does best – snowing almost continuously every day, totalling well over 5m throughout the month. February started out well, with very cold temps and ongoing snowfalls. It all came to a rather abrupt end, though, in the third week, and on February 25 the temperature got up to near 10 degrees, followed by rain. The snow returned on March 1, and we've seen a nice mix of sun and snow thus far. Total snowfall up on the mountain from the start of November is now up around 15m, with another big snow system bearing down on us as I write. So overall a pretty good season, it was a bit late to really get going but when it did it barely stopped until the little warm period in the last week of February. It's now been over 100 days since the start of the season, and so far we've had snow falling on about eight out of every 10 days, and close to half of those days had 20cm or more. That equates to more than enough powder days to keep even the most avid powder hounds very, very happy. – The Don

THIS is what happens when Hokkaido's leading brewery and chocolate makers spend far too much time together – chocolate beer. Sapporo beer and Royce chocolates joined forces to brew a limited edition beer that's apparently 'bitter with the smell of chocolate everywhere'. In other beer news, Japan's beer consumption has dropped by 13 per cent. That can't be the case in party town Niseko, so kanpai!

Kite-skiing takes off in Niseko

CHANCES are you've seen kite-surfing before, but kite-skiing? It's a craze sweeping the world, and Hirafu's Base Lodge manager Steve Roth is flying the... well... kite for Niseko. On the right day, Steve can be spotted floating through Kutchan's farmlands with his skis and kite – a pastime he's enjoyed here for the past three winters. "I love kite-surfing back home and skiing here, so the two go perfectly together for me," he says, adding that he'd like to take it further in the future. "Kiting is getting very big everywhere now – whether it's on waves, land, ice or snow. Snow-kiting is getting quite popular around the world, but I am the only one I know of who is kite-skiing in Niseko." All you need to kite-ski is similar equipment to kite-surfing – lines and a parachute – then all that's left is for the weather conditions to be just right. "The wind can't be too strong, or too light, and unlike skiing and boarding, the snow should ideally not be too deep!"

Most ride down the mountain, they ride up

TACKLING a snowy mountain on skis or a snowboard might be extreme enough for most of us... but how about on a motorbike?

That's what's going down – or up, actually – at the King of the Hill Snow Hill Climb, a free all-day spring event at Moiwa on April 11. The high-adrenaline motocross meet started in Sapporo in 2008, and has been moved to Moiwa for the first time this year. Organiser Iida-san said motorbike hill climbs had become very popular in Europe in the last few years – and they were just starting to rev up in Japan. "It's a crazy, fun experience for spectators and riders," he said. "Here you will see beginners to professionals and even Japanese motocross champions riders in their funky and original bike wear, on a wide range of machines from 50cc to cross bikes. There will even be four-wheelers racing to make this crazy event even more awesome!"

niseko news tracking down local stories

By Matthew Thomas

Looking back, what a winter!

WHEN it comes to a Niseko season, they don't come much better than this.

There was snow (and lots of it!), tourists swarmed in the streets and on the hill, and business was booming everywhere – bars were packed, you couldn't get into many restaurants unless you booked, and at times there was barely a spare bed in all of Hirafu.

Newbie nightspot Herbie's Umbrella Bar (right) opened its doors this season and was a huge après ski hit. "The town took a liking to Herbie's right from the get-go because Niseko is lacking in the European-style après ski atmosphere," manager Dan Morgan said. "Most afternoons it was jam-packed with people having their final ski run of the day at Herbie's."

Just down the road, Yuki Bar did a roaring trade this season, hosting plenty of live music, DJs and themed revelries that saw raging 'J-parties' spilling out into the street. Manager Miyazaki-san said more than 300 party-goers squeezed into Yuki Bar in peak season. "We want everyone to enjoy the local music scene," he said. "There is more that just great snow in Niseko – that was the key to our busy season," he said.

But it wasn't just the party scene that was heaving. Owner of Holiday Niseko Ashley Nicholls said that after offering some great deals, occupancy rose to as high as 90 per cent, and 60 per cent during the quieter periods. "Last season was a bit of a blip because of the recession, but we have bounced back this winter," he said.

Niseko Management Service (NMS) marketing manager Ben Thorpe said NMS had also enjoyed a fruitful year, with bookings about 20 per cent up on the 2008/09 season. "We believe these markets will continue to expand and look forward to introducing people to the Niseko experience," he said.

Herbie's rail jams a big hit

THE thrills and spills at the newly opened Herbie's Umbrella Bar rail jams drew some of the biggest crowds this season. Hundreds flocked to two massive jams in January and February, watching amateur, semi-pro and super-skilled local Japanese competitors hit rails set up in the small car park behind the popular new Austrian-themed après ski bar in Hirafu's main street. "People were stopping in the middle of the street to watch the rail jams, and we had to keep telling them to get off the road or they'd get hit by a car," Herbie's manager Dan Morgan said.

"There were heaps of skier and riders at a higher level than we expected, nailing a whole heap of tricks. Semi-pro guys rocked up, and there were some super-skilled Japanese 'J-Crew' at a really high level that we were stoked with."

Dan said Herbie's was looking forward to holding bigger and better rail jams next season.

Powderlife took to the slopes one sunny day to ask skiers and boarders what they like about being in Niseko in the springtime ...

Misaki, Takashi, Minakofu and Miyuki – who all work in Chiba (in the greater Tokyo area) – love it in Niseko in spring because our iconic volcano, Mount Yotei, peeks out and says hello more often on nice sunny days.

"We can't believe the powder is this good in spring," say Angela and Geoff from Australia. "But it doesn't snow the whole time – on a beautiful blue-sky day like today, it's nice to get out and enjoy the amazing views."

Sapporo university students Yusuke, Syugo, Miyako and Asumi prefer spring to practice their snowboard jumps and tricks in spring, because the snow gets soft and slushy on warmer days.

InSki's Wipeout of the Week

TODD Kennedy thought he could ski his way through this Niseko mushroom. He thought wrong.

While enjoying some tree runs in Hanazono, Todd tried to hit this soft-looking pillow so his mate could take an epic pow pic, however as it turns out the mushroom was rock-solid. For his efforts, Todd wins a helmet thanks to Inski in Hirafu.

Inski's Wipeout of the Week will return next season, so keep sending your stack pics to ed@powderlife.com and they might just get published next winter.

Powderlife can't wait to see all your stacks, so until next season, may all your wipeouts be public, excessive and captured on film!

Zac and Lucas from Australia were supposed to go to Utah for some spring skiing, but changed their plans and came to Niseko instead. A good choice, they say. "I was in Utah in the springtime last year and I prefer it in Niseko because of amazing snow and no crowds."

Mountain Style

TAKING his name into account, Christ Chan is most definitely a lord of fashion. This is the first time the bright and colourful Hong Kong snowboarder has donned all the colours of the rainbow – but he's religious about his mountain style. "Rainbows only come out after rain, but instead I'm trying to be a rainbow during a sunny day after lots of Niseko powder," he says. "But in the event of an accident, I also look very sharp and bright, and I'll be easy to spot." Christ's a human rainbow shooting down the hill wearing his vest jacket and outerwear by Korean brand, Shooting Star. His stylish striped pants are by North American brand Four Square. Christ rides a Forum Young Blood board, and keeps Niseko's springtime sun out of his eyes with Anon goggles. Looking as stylish on the mountain as Christ? Amen to that!

This big crew from Hong Kong, Singapore and Australia – Alan, Steven, Eva, Mary, Jackie, Brian, Victor, Quincy and Hann – all agree that spring in Niseko means the best of both worlds: sun and snow!

Kathy, Edmund, Ida, Ricky and May – all from Hong Kong – love spring because they don't have to share all this later-season powder snow with big crowds. "Plus, the temperature in March is much warmer than in the winter."

FLASH

Costumed revellers were dressed to the nines at Yuki Bar's Costume Party, while it was another flighty end to the Niseko darts league at Wild Bill's...

Dancing was the perfect crime for Officer Mika, while Maid Nana cleaned up on the dance floor at Yuki Bar's costume party.

Things got a little foggy for 'The Yas Man' walking from the chilly outdoors into Yuki Bar, where things were heating up, so he made some eye holes in his glasses.

Full-body cartoon character suits and splashes of ghoulish face paint were the order of the evening for this party quartet.

"Cheers to the camera," says Kaz, who was rockin' the party with Lydia and Tom at one of Yuki Bar's biggest nights of the season.

Jess and a couple of mates (yes, we lost the paper with everyone's names on it) enjoy a bevvy or two at Yuki Bar's costume night.

Mandy, Azza and David pause from partying for a quick happy snap, as Risa gives the crazy eyes from a distance.

Darts Finals @ Wild Bill's

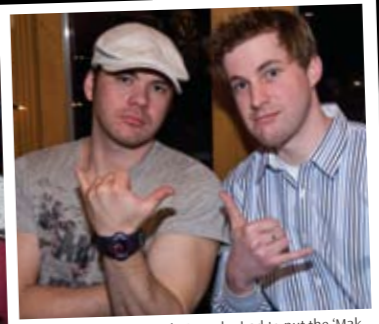

Costume Night @ Yuki Bar

No one was safe from MC Lachy on the mic, while the Dart Master himself, Azza, kept a close eye and a chalked hand on the score.

Al's team didn't make the finals, but he had even more fun on the sidelines, spending some quality time with his girl Tracey.

Mak wasn't playing any darts, so he had to put the 'Mak Attack' on hold for a night, while Michael perched himself front-row-centre and checked out the flighty action.

Two's company but three's even better, as Mika, Wennie and Allie have thrice the fun at Wild Bill's for darts finals night.

It was down to the wire, but Dart Vader shafted Shafted in the final family round to take out the 2009/10 Niseko Hirafu International Darts Grand Slam.

Everyone's a winner as Dart Vader and Shafted put their darts differences aside to celebrate another great season of throwing sharp things at a cork board.

Debbie took time out from Niseko Wine Supplies to get into grand finals spirits with Eri, Midori and Lizzie.

Wagyu Dining Sou, Hirafu Middle Village
MANY foreigners come to Niseko for the snow, but some of their best memories are of the traditional Japanese dining experiences. The hands-on hotpot restaurant Wagyu Dining Sou is a standout. Here the ingredients for your chosen dish are brought to the table where you cook them on a gas stove right in front of you. Sou was started five years ago by Atsuyo and Kazumasa Murakami. Atsuyo's parents opened Pension Mo'orea 25 years ago. When more and more foreigners started coming to Niseko about five years ago, Atsuyo's parents suggested they open a restaurant next to the pension. Be sure to cross this one off your dining to-do list! Map C3 (p47).

Niseko Ramen Mount, Kutchan
KAZUHIRO Sagara is a diehard powder lover. Originally from Tokyo, he first did a season in central Hokkaido resort Tomamu. That winter changed his life and he decided one day he'd live here for good. He brought his wife Hiromi to show her how beautiful Hokkaido was and try and convince her to move here. The plan worked. They moved to Sapporo before Kazuhiro found a job at a lodge in Niseko. He had always wanted to have his own restaurant so when he heard Ramen Mount was for sale, he jumped at the chance. They revamped the menu and gave the restaurant a new lease on life. Try the miso ramen or Niseko ramen, with local Kutchan potato cream. Route 5, Map F3 (p46).

in focus with roku-san

By Eriko Mentzos

NISEKO recently said goodbye to local legend Rokuro Takada – the founder of Kutchan's thriving taiko drum culture – who passed away at age 96. Eriko Mentzos interviewed Roku-san back in 2008...

When did you start playing the taiko?
When I was still in my mother's stomach. My family's religion is the Nichiren sect of Buddhism - while we chant a sutra, we play a fan drum. I always heard those rhythms when my mother was chanting, and probably drumming in her stomach!

What is the best thing about the taiko?
Well, people say I am too crazy about it, but I just love it! I could overcome anything because the taiko is always with me and encourages me in a great way. I think I forget everything while I'm playing. Now I go to schools and teach taiko to children. I'm so happy to see them enjoying themselves. Taiko is a simple instrument – anyone from a child to an adult and even an old one like me can play the taiko. Four generations of my family now play the taiko. Isn't that great?

Do you ever get tired after playing the taiko?
I never get tired from playing the taiko. I get energy from it. People tell me my hands are moving even when I am sleeping.

What was your taiko troupe Yotei Daiko Serve Association like in the beginning?
It wasn't big from the beginning. I used to play by myself. I brought my taiko to many events and played. In summer to cheer baseball teams, in winter to cheer skiers in competitions. My children didn't like me doing that – they said they were ashamed. But I kept doing it, and over time my children came to understand my passion. They started to play the taiko with me, and now we have so many people encouraging us to continue.

How much does a taiko drum cost?
It depends on the size and who makes it... but ours were about ¥25 million ($250,000) for 60 drums (about $4000 each!). And that was about half price!
Is there any meaning behind the rhythms?
Yotei Daiko's 'Arashi' is about people climbing Mount Yotei during a storm, then seeing a beautiful sunrise at the end. 'Niseko Renzan' describes Niseko's scenes – starting with peaceful nature in spring, then festivals in summer, skiing in winter, then thinking about the approaching spring. We've been working on a new one called 'Daichi' (the earth) for about 10 years. It's almost ready. We're practicing it now.

Do you have any big plans with Taiko?
Well, we would like to do sennin taiko when I turn 95 years old (drumming with 1000 people – Roku-san managed to reach 600 before he passed away). I will be 93 soon in March. So 95 is not so far from now.
What are your top three tips for visitors to Niseko?
1 I think everyone should try the taiko. Like I said before, it's a very simple instrument. There are some events you can actually try our taikos. 2 As you know, Niseko gets great snow in winter. So I would like everyone to enjoy this wonderful snow while they are in Niseko. 3 The colours are amazing here in autumn. Many people from all over Japan visit to see Niseko's autumn. I would like many people to come back in autumn.

powwow while waiting patiently in line at seicomart i heard a lady say...

By Matthew Thomas

ACCORDING to Wikipedia.com, it's been 3060 years since Niseko's iconic volcano Mount Yotei last erupted. That was in 1050BC, from a cone emerging from the north-west flank of the mountain at Lake Hangetsu. Prior to that, an earlier eruption was also recorded at 3050BC. So with 2000 years separating the previous two eruptions, are we 1060 years overdue for our next one?

SPEAKING of Yotei, it seems the little brother of Mount Fuji has inspired a local artist. Seasonal worker Sarah King from England recently sent a unique piece of art in to Powderlife. It's a typographical drawing of Yotei, abstractly illustrated with snow-themed words and sentences. Go on, take a closer look! For more of Sarah's art, check out www.sarahaking.com.

FOR those with a taste for wine and cheese, here's a hot local tip that should keep you happy. Pop into Seicomart and try their G7 range of Chilean wines (a bargain at only ¥500), and also check out the cheese section for some tasty (and cheap!) camembert. A ¥1000 note should easily cover it!

IF you're sticking around for some spring riding, Grand Hirafu has already started moving the park to its lofty new home at skier's right of the Ace Pair Lift #3. The park is moved up higher because the altitude means cooler temps, but we recommend waiting until the snow has softened up by about mid-morning, then heading up there with some good friends, food and drinks. The mountain's usually open until the first week of May, so who knows, you might even get to rock the Ray-Bans, don a hoodie, or even get a goggle tan!

NISEKO has got to have one of the longest winters in the world. After swinging open the gates of Mount Annupuri in late November, Grand Hirafu will finally close on May 5; Hanazono's open until April 6; Annupuri will close on May 5; Niseko Village will shut between April 7-28, then reopens until May 5; and Moiwa will be open until mid-April. All night-skiing will finish on March 27. Happy spring skiing!

WHEN you're next in Max Valu (Kutchan Map G3) in Kutchan doing a shop, try a sweet taste of the sea with taiyaki, a Japanese fish-shaped cake in the small bakery located near the registers. For those who are a little more experimental, try the takoyaki – dumplings made from fried or baked octopus balls. They always say never go shopping on an empty stomach, right?

SNOWBOARDING and skateboarding tend to go hand-in-hand, so for those skaters out there, why not visit Niseko's only bar with a skate bowl and mini-ramp, Loaf Lounge (Kutchan Map B3). Everyone is welcome, and they're open daily from 4.20pm until midnight. Drinking and driving is for losers, but drinking and skating at Loaf Lounge... well... that's a different story!

A LEADING Niseko bar owner told us earlier in the season that he was looking into bringing Aussie rock legend Jimmy Barnes over for a 'black tie and ski pants' gig this winter. That didn't quite eventuate this year, but apparently Barnesy's a huge fan of Niseko's pow pow, and we may just see him rocking out here next season!

five of the best kutchan dining experiences

COCORO OKONOMIYAKI – More than just a restaurant, Okonomiyaki Cocoro is an essential Japanese dining experience. Okonomiyaki is best described as a savoury pancake containing a variety of toppings, batters and sauces that vary from region to region. Cocoro doesn't simply cook the meal and serve it to you. In a cute little restaurant seating no more than about 10 people, diners get hands-on as staff teach how to prepare and cook their very own Osaka-style okonomiyaki on a hotplate. A very Japanese night out. 0136 22 1528, 0136 23 0008 (English) / 11am-9pm / Kutchan Map B6

Torimatsu – Yakitori are grilled meat skewers or kebabs, and Torimatsu is one of the best places in town to try them. Along with yakitori, Torimatsu also boasts an extensive izakaya menu. And you may just be the only gaijin (tourist) eating there! 0136 23 2893 / 5pm-12pm, closed Sundays / Kutchan Map A3

Enya – Built by the owners of Hirafu's former izakaya Big Cliff (now Paddy McGinty's), Enya's fast become a hotspot for locals. Breathe in the atmosphere rich with the smoky smells of flame-grilled barbecue, experience the flavours of fresh sashimi and more Japanese delights. 0136 22 3438 / 5.30pm-12pm, closed Sundays / Kutchan Map B3

Hamakko – On show at Hamakko is some of the world's best seafood from the Sea of Japan, contrasted by dishes starring Kutchan's famous potatoes, and a warming hot pot menu. At the end of the meal, staff are known to dress diners up in Japanese costume and take pictures. 0136 22 2430 / 5.15pm-11pm, closed Sunday / Map A4

Shunsai – Shunsai's modern Japanese cuisine boasts sumptuous treats and creative fusion of ingredients from Hokkaido land and sea. Trained in several countries, the expertly skilled chef prepares a delicious, beautifully-presented array of contemporary Japanese dishes. 0136 23 1882 / 11am-9pm, closed Sundays / Kutchan Map B5 local recipe buta no yawatamaki (pork roll with green beans, burdock, carrot and celery)

BUTA no Yawatamaki is a modern healthy dish cooked in many Japanese homes. It's usually accompanied by rice, miso soup and sautéed vegetables as part of a Japanese dinner. When sliced into small pieces it also makes a great canapé for a dinner party. This is one of the 32 recipes in Niseko Gourmet's new cook book, which participants in their Japanese cooking workshops receive free after the lesson.

Ingredients (Serves four)

Sauce

- 700g sliced pork (or beef if preferred)
- 6tbsp soy sauce
- ½ carrot
- 2tbsp mirin
- 50g vegetables (green beans, burdock, celery or spinach) cut into small sticks
- 2tbsp water
- 1clove garlic, sliced
- 1tbsp bonito stock powder
- 4tbsp vegetable oil for frying
- 4tbsp sugar
- 2tbsp salt and pepper
- 2tbsp cooking sake

Method

Bring large pot of water to the boil and blanch vegetables. Place slice of pork on chopping board, vegetables at one end. Roll up. Continue until all pork and vegetables are used. Make marinade sauce by combining all sauce ingredients in a bowl. Heat a little oil in fry pan and add rolled meat. Season with salt and pepper. Brown meat on all sides. Once meat is cooking remove from pan and set aside. In same pan add marinade sauce and turn heat up from medium to high. Allow sauce to simmer while stirring constantly for 2 to 3 minutes. Return meat to sauce and mix well for about 30 seconds. Remove from pan and slice into bite-sized pieces. Serve.

restaurant review jam bar

By Lizzy Hoo

MANY winter visitors to Niseko will come across Jam Bar. While this legendary Hirafu bar is best known for its late-night antics, Guru Guru parties and hard-dance music it also has a menu worth discovering and, surprisingly, is a great place for a quiet dinner.

I arrived at Jam Bar with two local regulars who, despite their combined eight Niseko winters, had never eaten there. After our meal they wondered why. Jam Bar is festooned with colourful lights, handmade furniture and quirky fixtures. The menu caters for all tastes and levels of hunger with a hearty mix of traditional Japanese yakitori, rice and noodle dishes, as well as hearty pizzas and burgers. The drinks menu is extensive offering a wide selection of cocktails and a chalkboard menu choice of over 30 shots.

We kicked off our night with a few cold beers, Midori Margherita and a Bend It Like Beckham cocktail. The evening's lengthy procession of food began with Shirasu Oroshi (freshly grated Japanese radish topped with whitebait) and Tuna Poki (raw tuna mixed with soy sauce). The Yudofu arrives just as the final morsel of Yakitori is savoured. Yudofu is fresh, soft tofu boiled lightly and dipped in a Japanese ponzu sauce and is a perfect counter to the yakitori and cheese-laden pizza on the way.

Our pizza of choice from a selection of five was Jam's Knockout Pizza. A Teriyaki Chicken Burger was selected to accompany the pizza and satisfy the beer drinker of the group. The burgers range from ¥700 to ¥850 and are served with thick potato wedges – an excellent choice for budget meal seekers.

There are loads of affordable eating options at Jam Bar including their delicious Yakisoba (¥650), Marinated Chicken Wings (¥650), Miso Salmon Steak (¥850) and Jam's Rice Balls (¥500). After mulling these options we decided they were for another time. Instead we went with the Osaka noodles and the waiter's recommendation – the Shiyaki Bimbimba – rice topped with mixed vegetables, pork and Korean kimchee, served in a hot-stone bowl. This was a great recommendation and definitely a highlight for everyone at the table.

Visitors and locals have their favourite, never-fail places to eat in Niseko – places you can turn up to any night of the week and feel safe in the knowledge you'll get a seat, a drink and good meal at a reasonable price. Jam Bar ticks all of these boxes. And after dinner you can choose your own adventure: work through the cocktail list knowing that the party crowd will soon appear; move on; or retire for the evening and go home.

powder tools gear to get you going when it's been snowing

By Bevan Colless

Salomon Blog Shoe

ONCE you've been to Japan a couple of times in long lace up boots, you tend to get over the 'please remove your shoes before entering' part of the culture. That's where the Salomon Blog shoes come in. They're easy to slip in and out of; suede uppers that are waterproof so a little moisture doesn't ruin them; and a fuzzy, cozy faux-fur lining makes your feet feel snug and well-loved. Unlike Sorels, that can leave you looking like a lumberjack, the low cut is discreet and Niseko's pow is so dry that wading through it without boots only leaves you with dust-on-cuffs that is easily brushed off. The soles have extra grip so you can leave the studded snow grip sole covers for the tap-dancers.

Lib Tech ReCurve Pow NAS

LET'S face it. Ski technology has been copying snowboarding technology since the mid-'90s. If it hadn't, we'd still be skiing on 220cm pencils. So it's about time a snowboard company made some skis instead of the other way 'round. The Lib Tech ReCurve Pow NAS (Narrow-Ass Snowboard) brings their brand's favoured camber-rocker combo. Built to float in the powder and shave the ice on the groomers and in the crud, the ReCurve Pow NAS helped big-mountain contest skier Tim Dutton win the '09 World Freeskiing Champs. Featuring rocker in the tip and tail, Lib Tech's pioneering Magne-Traction edge, as used on their Banana range, turns ice into powder. This makes the ReCurve Pow NAS perfect for Niseko.

Jones Snowboards: The Hovercraft

JEREMY Jones is a true snowboarding legend who has set out on his own to launch Jones Snowboards. Jeremy-san is well aware of what it takes to keep his board floating, and the Hovercraft is his No. 1 powder ride. Borrowing heavily from Gentemstick's Mantaray, it has a blunt nose and directional rockered tip for extra lift. I'm a bit disappointed by the length at 156cm, but it'd make a great rig for riders under 70kgs.

men who ride mountains stirling goldman: the season-ending injury

HAILING from the extreme terrain of Mt Baw Baw in Australia, Stirling Goldman was bred on waist-deep, man-made powder and extra steep chutes. Stirling has conquered the most beastly mountains across the world, and recently moved to Niseko. Stirling Goldman: a man who rides mountains...

So this is Niseko, and what have you done? Another year over... and Goldman's still number one. Yes punters, I'm back by popular demand for the final column of the season, for all those wannabes that wannabe me, and all the ladies that wannabe on me. You know it!

Well, certainly an interesting week in the life of one S. Goldman. Sometimes a king falls from his throne. Yes, that's right punters, Goldman has acquired three new words in his vocabulary: 'season-ending injury'.

So, the task was simple – go into the jump switch in waist-deep snow, pop off the 20-foot mushroom that had Mount Yotei in the background, pull a Rodeo 720, all while smiling for the cameras, giving a thumbs-up and bicep flex. Pretty simple stuff.

My preparation was flawless – 48 beers and satisfying ladies until the early hours. Another day in the life of... Anyway, all was going well, I pulled the trick, kept the photographers happy with the pose, and landed. But then disaster struck. Upon landing, one of my skis got caught under a tree root that had reared its ugly head. A little bit like a less than favourable lady that hits the perimeter of my dance floor after 2am. I felt instant pain in my knee as it twisted and I released out of my ski. It was at that moment that I knew Mother Nature had brought the world's greatest skier back to reality. I didn't fall, for we all know Goldman never falls. I just kept skiing down to the bottom on one ski – backwards – to keep the crowds happy.

Arriving back in town, I made my way down to my buddies at Niseko Physio. I kept smiling for the crowds, stopping for autographs, and photos with the ladies – for even my immense pain was not going to stop me making someone's holiday. Goldman is a giver, not a taker. The words from the physio table were not good, "...torn ACL, surgery and end of season." I had to have it explained a few times, for in all my years the thought of not being able to ski was foreign to me. The thought of my machine-like body failing was even more foreign.

The calls started to flood in once the news spread. Newspapers, magazines, sponsors, TV channels, old flings, wannabe flings. All were in shock. It's been a few days and the ladies are flocking in sympathy, so I can't say it's been all bad. Even though I'm off the hill, I have managed to ride a few bumps during the day, if you get my drift? I'm booked for surgery in about a month. The sponsors remain happy as it won't mean stopping any commitments with my modelling. They'll just have to focus on my chiselled upper body for a while – it's just simple logic.

Enjoy your off-season, punters!

backcountry safety stay safe on the mountain

NISEKO is renowned for its liberal, open-minded stance when it comes to its wide expanse of backcountry. But with that freedom comes the responsibility of the skier or snowboarder, because Niseko's powder may look soft and friendly, but it is as deadly and dangerous as it is light and fluffy...

Powderlife has collected tips from local experts to help keep you safe out there in Niseko's backcountry. Just remember, all the equipment and knowledge in the world are no substitute for due caution and common sense.

- 1. Obey the Niseko Rules
These rules are put in place for a reason, and are listed in this magazine on the course map, or in maps available around town.
- 2. Check weather and avalanche reports
Before venturing out into the backcountry, check the daily local avalanche report at <http://niseko.nadare.info>. Also check weather reports, so you know what to expect for the day ahead.
- 3. Listen to and obey ski patrollers.
They know what they're talking about and are there to ensure everybody stays safe.
- 4. Have essential equipment
Make sure everyone has sufficient safety equipment that works well, which should include a beacon, probe and shovel. More importantly, everyone should know how to work their equipment. A first aid kit, studied maps, torch, transceiver, phone, food, a change of clothes and spare gloves may also come in handy.
- 5. Plan your trip
Know where you're going, let someone know when you're planning to be back, learn the area, and take note of where ski patrol is located in case of emergency.
- 6. Don't enter closed gates
If the backcountry gates are closed, they are closed for good reason. It's this simple – if the gates are closed or crossed, stay out.
- 7. No go zones
These include Haru no Taki, and Yu no Sawa, which should not be entered due to high avalanche risks or other dangers. These are well sign-posted and marked on maps available in Powderlife (p26), and on course maps available in town.
- 8. Don't duck ropes
These ropes signify the boundary between the safe and the unsafe and should not be ducked or jumped in any case. And know that ski patrollers can and will confiscate your pass if you are doing the wrong thing.

- 9. Hire a guide
If you don't have the knowledge or experience for going off-piste, hire a reputable guide. Watch out for cowboys operating with little experience.
- 10. Explore the backcountry with reliable people
Know each other's strengths and weaknesses. The least experienced person should still know what to do in case of emergency.

Spring in your step late season hiking in Niseko

THERE'S plenty of lift-accessible terrain in Niseko, but for those who like to work a bit harder for their lines, springtime is perfect for hiking.

With several popular hikes within a snowball's throw from Hirafu, wandering off-piste and exploring some of the more uncharted terrain in the area is a must for any visitor to Niseko.

The mother of all hikes is Mount Yotei, Niseko's iconic landmark. Sitting at a mighty 1898m (6230ft), Yotei-zan is an active volcano and the longest, steepest hike in the area. To reach the peak, it usually takes between four and six hours, for a half-hour ski down. You can also ski into the crater!

Iwaonupuri is another popular hike, also located nearby and offering some good, steep rideable terrain after about a one-hour hike to the summit.

Goshiki is another popular run – hike along a ridgeline to the Annupuri peak and drop into one of the steepest runs on Mount Annupuri. The beauty of Goshiki is that after your hike and ride, you can soak your aching muscles in Goshiki Onsen.

As when exploring any new terrain, knowledge of the mountain is paramount, so if you don't know the area, there are plenty of guiding companies in town (turn to our Tours and Activities guide on page 41 for more information).

Also remember to take the right equipment, which should at least include a beacon, probe, shovel, backpack, a change of clothes, and ample food and water.

real estate news the niseko property market

By Matthew Thomas and Kristian Lund

Niseko Village changes hands in ¥6 billion deal

NISEKO Village ski resort has been bought out by high-profile Malaysian company YTL Hotels and Properties for ¥6 billion (approx. US$66 million), in a deal including the Hilton hotel.

YTL bought the resort from American owners Citigroup Financial Products, in the sale of the 506-room Hilton, the 200-room Green Leaf Hotel, and two 18-hole golf courses.

Niseko Village also encompasses 155 ha of ski mountain, with seven ski lifts and 15 ski trails, leisure amenities, natural hot springs, and 462 ha of freehold land.

YTL president James McBride said the company's master plan for the resort included a sophisticated village atmosphere with private houses, ski-in-ski out estates, onsens, and a retail and restaurant centre. He said the plans would be inspired by chic destinations like Aspen and Vail in Colorado, Whistler in British Columbia, and St Moritz – Niseko's Swiss sister city.

YTL has a collection of high-profile luxury properties in its portfolio. Niseko – along with the development of the Muse Hotel De Luxe in the French resort town of Saint-Tropez – is expected to be a highly complementary asset to YTL's growing international portfolio, said McBride.

He said the acquisition would enable YTL to participate in one of Japan's finest ski resort destinations, adding there was huge potential to develop Niseko Village into a world-class, four-season resort through luxury residential and mountain retail development.

"As a company with a very strong financial position, YTL Hotels took advantage of the economic downturn investing in the company's future growth," said McBride.

"The locations of these new hotels and resorts were thoughtfully chosen, so we could integrate the local environment and culture seamlessly into our existing collection of properties, bringing out the best of each destination."

YTL has expanded significantly in the past year, also acquiring Swatch Art Peace Hotel in Shanghai, China; The Chedi in Phuket, Thailand; and both Pulau Gaya and Pulau Tiga in Borneo.

It is widely known that Citigroup was hit hard during the global financial crisis, and has since been strategically selling off many of its assets around the world.

Season 2009/10 and beyond

THE Niseko real estate market bounced back into favour with investors this year after a slow season last year following the economic crisis. Powderlife spoke to several local real estate figures to get their thoughts on the season and projections for the future.

Grant Mitchell, Tracks Real Estate

Review: The season panned out pretty much as I expected, with decent sales volumes despite lingering global economic worries and the lack of bank financing. There is now a strong base for more sales over the summer and higher sales volumes next winter. Buyers' focus has also broadened from last season's obsession with Hirafu ski-in/ski-out properties to 'walk-in/walk-out' Hirafu properties and other resort locations such as Annupuri this winter.

Projections: The Hanazono, Niseko Village and Capella projects will have a positive impact on Niseko's property market. The development companies' marketing campaigns will access buyers usually beyond local companies and raise general awareness of Niseko. Potential buyers will spill over and buy into other Niseko properties.

Ruskin McLennan, Niseko Property

Review: This season was characterised by the retreat of the Aussie buyers and the rise of HK, SG and Chinese buyers. Property has clearly been divided into ski-in ski-out and the rest. The rise of the prestige market continues with the strongest sales this season being in the $1 million US range and above in The Vale Niseko and Capella. High points were the sale of 880 tsubos in Izumikyo and the sale of a 5 million USD villa in Capella.

Projections: I see the move to high end property continuing. The success of the restaurants and bars will see more commercial property start to be developed. The sale of the Hilton site will have a strong positive influence on property values in the area.

Derek Kennewell, LJ Hooker Niseko

Review: This season's property market has shown that Niseko is truly finding its feet as a very real and maturing property market with a strong future. Interest from developers and buyers alike is amazingly strong in all budget ranges, however, with the tight purse strings from the world's banks it has been only the higher liquidity buyers able to make purchases and in many cases get amazing deals.

Projections: Exponential growth in visitor numbers, property offerings and also services available to holiday makers. Major resort companies in Asia have seen this trend and are well and truly on their way. The increased marketing campaigns by these companies also helps to market Niseko as a whole, and will have a flow-on effect.

John Barton, Meikle and Associates

Review: With our location (opposite The Vale Niseko), our customer base has been demanding ski-in/out-property. At the same time, some customers have chosen to land bank in Annupuri and Hanazono with forthcoming developments in mind or to identify opportunities in the current market. We were very pleased with sales we made in The Vale Niseko including both penthouses.

Projections: Developments in the next few months will have a big impact on the rest of the year and we look forward to infrastructure in the area keeping pace. There are some rumours of finance packages becoming available which will have a big impact. It is still an uncertain world in an economic sense but the fundamentals driving Niseko onwards and upwards remain unchanged.

Visitors not on a full travel package have a few options to get to Niseko and back. Although the trip is only 110km, due to icy roads and no direct train route, it takes two to three hours.

Bus For those on a budget, the bus from the airport is a cheap and efficient option, departing about every 30 minutes from the airport to Niseko. They take about three hours, including a rest stop halfway and a drop-off at Rusutsu. Costs about ¥2,300 one-way, and ¥3,850 for a round trip. Bus companies doing the route are: Whiteliner Buses, Chuo Bus, Donan Bus, Hokkaido Resort Liner.

TRANSPORT AROUND NISEKO

For getting around Niseko there are basically three options: taxi, bus and car rental.

Taxis Taxis cost about ¥2000 for a ten minute trip. Drivers probably won't speak English, and you will need a business/place name and map for where you are going – often if you just have the address they may not be able to find it. For best chance of success, take directions/street names in Japanese if possible.

Bus Shuttle buses connect the resorts and different areas of Niseko including nearby Kutchan Town. Some are free or included in the cost of lift passes.

Niseko United Shuttle The Niseko United Shuttle connects the Hirafu, Niseko Village and Annupuri resorts from season open until March and is free for those with an All Mountain Pass. See the timetable on the course map for more information. If you have a 12-point ticket, one point per trip is needed. Others need ¥500 for adult and ¥300 for child per ride.

Grand Hirafu Village Shuttle Bus Free shuttle buses run throughout Hirafu every 15 minutes all day every day until the end of night skiing.

Hanazono Shuttle Bus The Hanazono Shuttle Bus travels throughout Hirafu Village and out to Hanazono 7.50am-6pm for those who don't want to ski over or get first tracks.

Free Kutchan Night Go Bus The Kutchan Night Go Bus runs from Hirafu to Kutchan Station (about 10 minutes away) every night. Enjoy shopping, eating, drinking and karaoke in Kutchan. It leaves Hirafu every hour or so between 5-11.30, and similarly leaves Kutchan every hour or so between 6-11pm. Check local timetables.

Yumeguri Onsen Shuttle Bus Take a tour across Niseko sampling various local onsens (and the attractions around them) all for ¥500 (December – March).

MONEY

Banking There is an international ATM in Hirafu in the Hokkaido Tracks Holidays office, Yama Shizen East building. Open 8am-9pm. There are also ATMs in Kutchan at the post office and 7-Elevens. Check the Kutchan map on p46. You can also use the international ATM on level 3 of the airport when you arrive at Sapporo (New Chitose Airport).

Credit Cards Lift tickets, ski hire and ski lessons can all be paid for by credit card. Most large restaurants and some small ones also will accept them.

Currency You can exchange most major currencies in Niseko. Ask your accommodation provider or in Kutchan at the main post office or Hokuyo Bank (corner of Eki Mae Dori and Route 5).

SHOPPING

Hirafu There are two convenience stores in town for all your local shopping needs. The famous Seicomart in the heart of Hirafu is arguably king, but Lawson, the blue shop just down the road towards Kutchan, is another option that offers smaller queues and a larger range of international products.

Kutchan Several specialty stores in Kutchan may also come in handy when you wish to expand from the stock in Seicomart or Lawson. Best Denki stocks all your electrical and technical needs (within reason). M-Pocket has imported groceries, specialising in imported alcohol. Homac shelves basically every household product known to man, while Max Value and Co-Op are your major supermarkets. Co-Op is also a department store. The ¥100 Shop stocks cheap groceries, stationery and more, all priced around – you guessed it – ¥100. There are no pharmacies or stationery stores in Hirafu, but several in Kutchan, such as the Tsuruha Drug.

COMMUNICATIONS

Internet Most accommodation in Niseko will have some form of internet access. J-Sekka and Downtown Café have internet terminals and there are wireless hotspots across town. Try A-Bu-Cha, Downtown Café, Grandpapa and Java Bar.

Mobile Phones Only 3G phones will work in Japan. Some accommodation providers offer mobile hire.

Domestic Calls Green and grey public phones take coins or pre-paid telephone cards. Local calls don't require the '0136', unless made from a mobile phone.

Directory Assistance Dial 104 (toll call) and ask for an English speaker. You must know the location and name to get a number.

International Calls International direct dial can be made using any of the following prefixes, 001 (KDDI), 0041 (ITJ) and 0061 (IDC). They will cost you.

Calling Cards The cheapest way to call overseas is with a calling card available from your accommodation provider or convenience stores.

Post Offices Look for the red 'T' symbol. Stamps and the post office box are at Piz Gloria convenience store. For other services you will need to go to the post office in Kutchan.

When dialling from overseas to Niseko, add Japan's international calling code "81" to the front and drop the "0".

niseko resort guide info to help you get around

ELECTRICITY

Standard voltage is 100v AC. You can use many higher watt items without a problem but higher wattage devices such as hair dryers may not run on full power. Plugs are the flat two-blade type. Many recent buildings have 240v with Australian-shaped plugs.

STAY SAFE AROUND TOWN

No skiing/boarding on roads or footpaths!!

It may seem fun and so much quicker and easier than walking, but skiing or boarding home from the hill can be one of the silliest things you can do in Niseko.

Because the roads don't have as much snow on them, and generally a lot of ice, your skis or board won't stop or turn like they do on the mountain, which could see you skidding into an unsuspecting pedestrian... or a bus. Please, keep your riding on the hill.

Walking on icy roads About one third of all injuries in Hirafu are caused by people falling on the street. Wear shoes with good grip or buy and attach rubber sole cleats with metal studs. Take small steps, walk slowly and never run, don't carry heavy loads, and keep both hands out of your pockets and free for balance. Also, when crossing the road, factor in that the roads are icy and slippery and that it will take cars longer to stop for you.

Don't walk or park under roofs Believe it or not, heavy snow sliding from rooftops kills people in this part of the world, and can seriously damage cars. So don't stand or park your car beneath roofs.

Drinking dangers If you're going drinking, make sure you leave the bar with someone else and try not to walk home alone. Also make sure you rug up and stay warm. People have been known to fall asleep in the snow on the way home after going out drinking in Niseko, and it has once ended in tragedy.

By studio tdes

HAVE you fallen in love with Niseko? Or perhaps in Niseko? Many visitors to Niseko think about how they can afford to come back. If you can get the appropriate visa, why not spend a season working in Niseko? In today's lesson there's some language for workers to use – and for customers to understand. And remember, smiles and gestures go a long way too ☺

1 Irasshaimase – Welcome

When people walk into your business, greet them with: Irasshaimase! Volume can range from a hearty bellow/squawk to talking level, depending on the establishment.

2 Nan mei sama desu ka? – How many in your group?

When people arrive at your izakaya or restaurant, you'll need to find out how big their group is: Nan mei sama desu ka? If it's obvious, just check: Ni mei sama desu ka? (Two people?)

3 Douzo kochira desu – Please sit here/this way please

When you've decided where the customers will sit, gesture towards the table and say: Douzo, kochira desu.

4 Onomimono wa okimari deshou ka? – What would you like to drink?

The verb to drink in Japanese is nomu. A drink is nomi-nomo (put an o in front of many words to make them more formal). After you've given out the menus, ask them if they've decided what they'd like to drink: Onomimono wa okimari deshou ka? A bit later on ask for the food order: Oshokuji wa okimari deshou ka?

5 Kashikomarimashita – Certainly

When a customer orders something you can say: Kashikomari mashita (Certainly). If you're working behind a bar, you can just repeat the order back to them with a desu ne attached. Biiru futasu onegaishimasu (Two beers, please). Biiru futasu desu ne (Two beers, coming right up!)

6 Moushiwake gozaimasen – I'm terribly sorry

Apologizing is hugely important in the service industry in Japan. Sorry is generally sumimasen or gomen nasai, but when speaking to customers, moushiwake gozaimasen is usually more appropriate. Say it if you have run out of something on the menu, or spill a drink on a customer.

7 Douzo – Here you go

When you give customers a plate of food or drink, you can simply say douzo (Here you go). If it's food that is to be shared (like at an izakaya), just announce what it is when you're putting it on the table: Eda mame desu (This is eda mame).

8 Osageshite yoroshii desu ka? – Can I take these?

At an izakaya you don't need to whip away the plates as soon as customers have finished. When you do want to clear the table ask: Osageshite yoroshii desu ka? (Is it OK if I take this?)

9 Wakarimasen – I don't understand

If you can't understand some rapid-fire Japanese coming at you, you'd better learn this: Wakarimasen (I don't understand). You could also announce: Nihongo dekimasen (I can't speak Japanese).

10 Otsukare sama deshita – Well done, good job etc

This is a very important word to know if you have Japanese co-workers. Say it as they are leaving, or before you leave. There's a short version you can use with friends and co-workers: otsukare! If you're an instructor say otsukare sama deshita to your students at the end of the lesson.

Visiting Skier "Saved"

Staff members of local accommodation provider HolidayNiseko.com were praised for their recent actions that prevented an almost certain tragedy.

Speaking to reporters, international skier Mr Ty Tass thanked HolidayNiseko.com for saving his ski vacation. "If it hadn't been for Holiday Niseko I certainly would not be here today. Without Holiday Niseko's great deals on accommodation in central locations, I wouldn't have been able to afford the trip. Holiday Niseko saved the day!"

HolidayNiseko.com manager, Ms Annie Buddyhome refused to comment on the incident saying, "We prefer to let our prices do the talking."

after the melt paragliding

FOR adrenaline junkies visiting Niseko during the warmer months, paragliding is an activity that soars above the rest.

Gliders are able to plunge off peaks at Annupuri and the west-ridge of nearby Rusutsu ski resort, to enjoy a gentle glide and a soaring bird's eye view of the lush, colourful Hokkaido countryside below.

All this is possible with the help of Niseko Flight Park in Niseko Town, run by local paragliding pro, Endo-san.

With an international paragliding license, gliders with their own gear can make a solo jump for around ¥2000. A tandem jump for unlicensed gliders with no equipment will cost around ¥13,000 for a 10 to 20-minute flight, depending on weather conditions.

Local paraglider Dave Mills – who runs pension Kinoko in Hirafu's Lower Village – has been gliding since 1993. He has spent two summers here, and says Niseko looks nothing short of amazing from the sky.

He says paragliding in Niseko is unique, because instead of having to drive or hike to a launch point, all jumps are easily accessed by gondola.

"It's spectacular, all the different greens you can see – you can get a unique aerial view of the drastically different seasons when you're paragliding in Niseko," says Dave, who has had more than 800 glides worldwide, and reaches heights up to 1000m above Niseko.

"From up there on a clear day you can see some amazing things you can't see anywhere else. You can fly above Mount Annupuri and other nearby ranges, and also see all the way out to the ocean. You can even fly back right over the top of Mount Yotei's crater if the conditions and thermals are right."

niseko cycle week 2009 event was 'perfect'

THE second Niseko Cycle Week fulfilled its promise to be bigger and better than the first, with organisers and participants agreeing the event was a huge success.

"It was perfect," declared Jess Ripper, one of the many volunteer event organisers of the September event. There were definitely more people involved in all the events overall, which is testament to the fact the event is growing, and it's here to stay.

"The response from the people involved this year, especially those who came from overseas, was overwhelming – they were blown away by the surroundings, and every event in general ran a lot smoother."

Highlights of the week included:

- The hugely successful opening and closing gourmet barbecues, which were run alongside mountain bike events and attracted plenty of families and non-cyclists, as well as the hardcore pedal pushers.
- Bike to Work Day, which got more than 100 locals, including plenty of non-cyclists, pedalling to work.

- The night-time social events including the Black Diamond Lodge Fire and Jump Jam, featuring local mountain bikers taking on three massive jumps, and Northfield Lodge's Cranked Movie and Mexican Night.
- Much greater participation in the intermediate level social road rides, which were held almost every day of the week across Niseko.

Jess said one of the most satisfying aspects of the second Niseko Cycle Week was that it had fulfilled its aims laid down before the event:

- To promote the area's amazing potential as a mountain biking and road cycling destination.
 - To promote an active lifestyle and health awareness.
 - To contribute to the notion of environmental sustainability through the use of bikes rather than cars.
- Niseko Cycle Week will be back again next summer so keep an eye on www.nisekocycleweek.com.

On again September 10-20, 2010
